GIRL SHOT DEAD, BABY IN ARMS, AT RESTAURANT DOOR

Jealous Sweetheart of Beautiful Young Wife Fires Fatal Shot.

ESCAPES ARREST.

Flees After Killing Woman Who Left Him to Work in Cafe.

Mrs. Carmella De Gruccio, eighteen type of Italian beauty that is the theme of poets and the model for artists, was killed to-day by John Omega, who left his wife and six children for the charms of the young roman. It was a strange case of mad infatuation that led Omega to hunt for the woman and shoot her as she entered a little restaurant at No. 186 Grand street, Williamsburg.

Carmella was one of those Carmenesque persons who begin snaring hearts at an early age. At seventeen she was the wife of Michael De Gruccio and the mother of two children. A short time ago she left her husband and procured a warrant for him charging him with assault. The husband went away; nobody knows where.

Then came John Omega, thirty years of age, dressed in the latest mode and quite a dashing young fellow whose age and appearance gave no token of the fact that he had reached the dignity of being the head of a family

"All right," said Omega, returning his revolver to his pocket.

But the next day he came back and manded the instant dismissal of Carmelia. He went away after making the demand and early to-day when the first workers appeared at the restaurant they found Omega waiting.

"Where is Carmelia?" he demanded.

"She has not come down yet," replied a helper.

"So she is still working here; she has net been discharged?" he shouted. The helpers scented trouble in the tone and

At that moment the girl entered the side door. In her arms she bore the young child-scarcely old enough to know what any event in life meant. She saw the man waiting near the door. "Oh, John!" she shouted, clutching the child tightly.

There was a quick movement of the man's arm. The helpers saw a bright streak as the revolver came to a level and they heard its sharp report.

The woman fell to the floor dead. The buillet had pierced har breast, barely missing the infant in its course. missing the infant in its course. SLAYER ESCAP_8 WITHOUT

Jewelry Buyers Rely on Lambert Reputation

It is estimated that the great American people spend in one year $300,000,000 for diamond and gold jewelry. A great part of this stupendous sum changes hands in this sunlit month of June, largely for wedding, engagement and graduation gifts. Buyers who have no practical knowledge of jewelry wisely rely on the reputation of the retailer, and that is why the Lambert store is a busy place just now. It is a comfort to KNOW that a house with an unquestioned record of over thirty-four years GUARANTEES THE QUALITY OF EVERY THING IT SELLS, and keeps prices down by manufacturing largely, importing diamonds and other foreign products DIRECT, paying spot cash, contenting itself with moderate profits and never dealing with

Queen Mary Buys Diamonds

Much of the coronation gift of $60,000 presented by British Marys of all ranks to their namesake, the Queen, will, it is said, be nvested in diamonds. We commend this royal example to Amerians with all the more earnestness since we can supply them with diamonds of fine quality at prices that save them money and thus increase the value of their investment. Diamond prices always tend upward, please remember. All the diamond solitaires here pictured are set in hand-made Lambert mountings of solid 14-karat gold.
